The Role of the SLP in Palliative Care

FACULTY

Tiffany M. Mohr, MA, CCC-SLP, BCS-S, CBIS, is an SLP and Board Certified Specialist in Swallowing, currently working at Orlando Regional Medical Center, a Level I Trauma Center in Central Florida. She has worked in the field for more than 20 years, most of which has been spent with adults in acute care, particularly with patients with complex medical conditions. Much of her focus has been on refining the complex critical thinking process necessary in working with this population. She is involved with the BioEthics Committee at the hospital, recently helped to start up the ALS Multidisciplinary Clinic for Orlando Health, and is working to develop the interprofessional relationship between the SLP department and the pulmonary program through training/curriculum development. She currently serves on the ASHA SIG 13 Coordinating Committee and enjoys being a part of the advocacy and education aspects of the volunteer work necessary to advance the profession.
