FACULTY

Christina Bradburn, MS, CCC-SLP, works as a public school speech-language pathologist and educational diagnostician in Indiana. Along with currently pursuing her PhD from Texas Woman’s University, she is a national seminar leader for the Bureau of Education and Research, speaking on the topic of integrating speech and language interventions into classrooms and curriculum using a workload approach. She is the past Vice-President of Speech Language Pathology for the Indiana Speech-Language-Hearing Association and is a member of the ASHA School Issues Advisory Board as the representative from the ASHA Leadership Development Program, which she completed in 2016. She was part of the inaugural group of mentors for the ASHA Leadership Mentoring program in 2018. Her research interests include classroom-based intervention in the schools, classroom teacher impact on treatment effectiveness, and using flexible service delivery models to meet student needs.
