FACULTY

C. Melanie Schuele, PhD, CCC-SLP, is a professor in the Department of Hearing and Speech Sciences, Vanderbilt School of Medicine. Her scholarly efforts aim to advance the practices of speech-language pathologists in the schools. She conducts research on phonological awareness and complex syntax. She directs the School Speech-Language Pathology Specialty Track that provides specialized training to master's students preparing for a career as a school speech-language pathologist. She has been the director of three personnel preparation grants from the U.S. Department of Education, providing specialized training in language and literacy to master's SLP students and PhD students.

Financial Disclosures:

- Book royalties from Brookes Publishing
- Presenter royalties from Northern Speech Services
- Salary from Vanderbilt University Medical Center
- Salary support from MCHB, ED, and NIH
- Financial compensation from ASHA for this presentation
- Grant support from Predators Foundation, Dollar General Foundation

Nonfinancial Disclosures:

- None