Deborah Crawford, MS, CCC-SLP, is the manager for Kennedy Krieger Institute (KKI) Center for Autism and Related Disorders Outpatient Speech-Language Services. In addition to her supervisory responsibilities, she participates on diagnostic evaluation teams, conducts individual speech-language evaluations, and provides treatment in the clinic. Crawford graduated from Towson University with a master of science in speech-language pathology. She worked in the Baltimore County Public School system before joining the KKI Center for Autism and Related Disorders in 2008 as a research coordinator on a study investigating the developmental trajectories of children with autism compared to typically developing children and children with specific language impairments. She has served as a clinical reviewer for the CDC-funded Autism and Developmental Disabilities monitoring system (ADDM). Crawford is a board-certified speech-language pathologist in the state of Maryland.
