Cultural Considerations in Diagnosis and Treatment of Literacy Issues

FACULTY

Lakeisha Johnson, PhD, CCC-SLP, is an assistant professor in the Communication Science and Disorders program at Florida State University and an ASHA-certified speech-language pathologist. She is also affiliated faculty at the Florida Center for Reading Research. Her primary research interests include language, literacy, dialect, and executive function development in African American children. Dr. Johnson believes in building and leveraging research-practice partnerships to ensure children from vulnerable populations obtain strong language and literacy skills.

Financial Disclosures:

- Assistant Professor at Florida State University
- Author of DAWS program
- Maya's Book Nook founder
- Financial compensation from ASHA for this presentation

Nonfinancial Disclosures:

- None