FACULTY

Elizabeth Buck, MA, CCC-SLP, is a clinical assistant professor in the Department of Speech, Language, and Hearing Sciences at Indiana University (IU), Bloomington. In this role, she serves as the building speech-language pathologist at William Penn School 49 in Indianapolis Public Schools (IPS), where she supervises graduate students doing school-based clinical practicum. Additionally, Elizabeth supervises undergraduate students in IU’s speech-language pathology assistant (SLPA) program and provides regular professional development to school-based SLPs. Elizabeth has been practicing in schools for 9 years, prior to which she worked in the medical setting. She received her bachelor’s degree from Butler University and her master’s degree from Indiana University. Her professional interests include language and literacy development and disorders and translational science as it relates to service delivery and treatment in schools.

Financial Disclosures:

- Financial compensation from ASHA for this presentation

Nonfinancial Disclosures:

- None