FACULTY

Carmin Bartow, MA, CCC-SLP, BCS-S, is a licensed and certified speech-language pathologist who is board-certified in swallowing and swallowing disorders. She is currently employed at Vanderbilt University Medical Center, where she specializes in dysphagia management, trach/vent intervention, and swallowing disorders in the head and neck cancer population. In addition to her clinical responsibilities, she facilitates a head and neck cancer support group and enjoys presenting and teaching at Vanderbilt as well as at state and national conferences. Bartow has authored an ASHA publication entitled “Tracheostomy Tubes in Adults; Management of Communication and Swallowing Impairments.” She teaches dysphagia as an adjunct professor at Tennessee State University and is an educational consultant for Passy-Muir, Inc.

Financial Disclosures

- Received financial compensation from ASHA for this presentation
- Receives speaking fees from Passy-Muir, Inc.

Nonfinancial Disclosures

- No nonfinancial relationships to the content of the presentation