

FACULTY

Michelle Boisvert, PhD, CCC-SLP, runs her own practice delivering telepractice to children and adults in the U.S. and oversees. Her research interests include the use and development of telepractice programs to serve individuals with autism spectrum disorder and other communication disorders. She has published her work and has conducted many seminars on technical, reliability, and validity issues regarding telepractice. In addition, Boisvert has trained providers on the application of telepractice to deliver services to students with communication disabilities.

Financial Disclosures:

- Provides services through telepractice
- Financial compensation from ASHA for this presentation

Nonfinancial Disclosures:

- Member of ASHA SIG 18 and editor of Perspectives on Telepractice