Becky Khayum, MS, CCC-SLP, is president and co-founder of MemoryCare Corporation, a therapy company that provides services to families coping with dementia around the Chicago region. She is also an adjunct instructor at the Mesulam Center for Cognitive Neurology and Alzheimer's Disease at Northwestern University’s Feinberg School of Medicine, where she focuses on the Communication Bridge program, a research study that investigates person-centered interventions for individuals living with primary progressive aphasia. Her clinical expertise focuses upon application of the life participation approach for people with different clinical dementia syndromes, while integrating technology to support evidence-based interventions. She is involved in Aphasia Access, a community of professionals dedicated to increasing meaningful life participation for people living with aphasia.
