

FACULTY

Lori Burkhead Morgan, PhD, CCC-SLP, has been a practicing speech-language pathologist since 1994 in a variety of health care settings, including inpatient and outpatient rehabilitation, sub-acute, and acute care with level-one trauma center designation. She subsequently earned a doctorate in rehabilitation sciences from the University of Florida in 2005 while continuing clinical practice. She has developed an expertise in evaluation and treatment of swallowing and communication disorders in medically complex patients, particularly those with head and neck cancer and respiratory compromise. She has published several peer-reviewed articles regarding evaluation and treatment of dysphagia and presented on the topic to both domestic and international audiences. Burkhead Morgan is currently part-time faculty and an educational consultant at the Medical College of Georgia at Augusta University.

Financial Disclosures

- Paid educational consultant for Passy-Muir (but receives no royalties nor any financial benefit from discussing the company's products)
- Financial compensation from ASHA for this presentation

Nonfinancial Disclosures

- None