FACULTY

Nancy Creaghead, PhD, CCC-SLP, is a professor of communication sciences and disorders at the University of Cincinnati, where she teaches and conducts research in the areas of language and speech sound acquisition and intervention. She has had previous experience in preschool classes for children with language and hearing impairments and in a special school for children with learning disabilities. Her research, publications, and presentations have been primarily in the areas of language and phonological acquisition and disorders and classroom communication. She has lectured at numerous workshops and meetings at the local, state, national, and international levels, including the 1978 through 2018 ASHA Conventions. She holds an MS from Purdue University and PhD from the University of Cincinnati.

Financial Disclosures
- Salary from the University of Cincinnati
- U.S. Department of Education, OSEP Personnel Preparation Leadership grant to prepare PhD graduates in language and literacy
- Financial compensation from ASHA for this presentation

Nonfinancial Disclosures
- Past presenter at ASHA Conventions and OhioSLHA conventions
- Presentations at multiple state associations, school districts, and other organizations
- Published in ASHA and other journals

Lisa Froehlich, PhD, CCC-SLP, has spent the last 28 years working within the school system. She worked 25 years as an SLP in Cincinnati, Ohio, before transitioning into the role of supervisor. She served 6 years on the Ohio Speech and Hearing Board, where she advocated strongly for school-based speech-language pathologists. Currently, she is a special education supervisor for Robbinsdale Area School District in Minnesota. She oversees the special education practices of three school teams as well as the post-secondary transition activities of students with disabilities. She has had previous experience in preschool classrooms with children who are language impaired and hearing impaired, working with the adolescent population, and in special programs for children with learning disabilities. Froehlich strongly believes in the importance of collaboration with teachers and providing services in the classroom. Her research and presentations have been primarily in the areas of adolescent language and literacy. She holds an MS and PhD from the University of Cincinnati.
Cultivating Student Success Through Effective Service Delivery

Financial Disclosures
• ASHA covered hotel costs for travel associated with this presentation

Nonfinancial Disclosures
• None

Sophia McAllister, MS, is a general education teacher for grades 1-3 at The New School Montessori in Cincinnati Ohio. She previously spent 14 years teaching grades 1-3 in Cincinnati public schools. She has had previous experience teaching 6th grade science and as a 5th/6th grade intervention specialist. She holds an undergraduate degree in education from Xavier University and a master's degree in special education from The College of Mount St. Joseph.

Financial Disclosures
• ASHA covered hotel costs for travel associated with this presentation

Nonfinancial Disclosures
• None