

FACULTY

Kyomi Gregory, PhD, CCC-SLP, is an Assistant Professor at Pace University in the Communication Sciences and Disorders department. Her undergraduate degree major was in Communication Sciences and Disorders, and she completed a double minor in Black Studies and Linguistics from SUNY-New Paltz. She obtained her master's degree at University of Buffalo and her PhD from Louisiana State University. For her dissertation, she examined assessment of children from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds who speak nonmainstream dialects such as African American English and Southern White English and explored the use of teacher ratings. She has been a practicing speech-language pathologist for the last 12 years, working with both children and adults. Gregory worked for the New York City Board of Education in Brooklyn prior to entering her PhD program. She is currently a member of the Professional Development Committee and the journal club for ASHA SIG 1 (Language Learning and Education). In addition, she currently serves on the board of directors for the National Black Association for Speech-Language and Hearing (NBASLH), and she is the topic area expert in nonmainstream dialects, cultural humility, and awareness for The Informed SLP.

Financial Disclosures

- Assistant Professor in the Communication Sciences and Disorders Department at Pace University
- Topic area expert for nonmainstream dialects, cultural humility, and cultural awareness for The Informed SLP
- Complimentary ASHA Learning Pass subscription from ASHA for this presentation

Nonfinancial Disclosures

- Member of the Professional Development Committee and journal club for ASHA SIG 1