

FACULTY

Bruce Poburka, PhD, CCC-SLP, is Professor of Communication Sciences and Disorders at Minnesota State University, Mankato. Poburka has conducted research, published, and presented on a variety of voice disorders topics. These include perceptual and instrumental assessment, treatment, stroboscopy rating forms, techniques for stroboscopy rating training, and use of technology in education.

Financial Disclosures

- Professor at Minnesota State University
- Complimentary ASHA Learning Pass subscription from ASHA for this presentation

Nonfinancial Disclosures

- ASHA member
- ASHA SIG 3 affiliate

Cara Sauder, PhD, CCC-SLP, is currently a lecturer at the University of Washington in the Speech and Hearing Sciences Department and is a speech-language pathologist in the Department of Otolaryngology at the University of Washington Medical Center. Her main research interest includes investigating potential sources of variability in making visual-perceptual videostroboscopic judgments. She has also conducted clinical research related to voice assessment and treatment outcomes, research related to communication in speakers with head and neck cancer, and has over 15 years of experience as a voice clinician.

Financial Disclosures

- Salaried lecturer at the University of Washington
- Complimentary ASHA Learning Pass subscription from ASHA for this presentation

Nonfinancial Disclosures

- ASHA member
- ASHA SIG 3 affiliate