Aneesha Virani, PhD, CCC SLP, graduated with her doctorate degree in Communication Sciences and Disorders from the Louisiana State University in 2012. Her interests include the diagnosis and management of voice, airway, and swallowing disorders, particularly in the head and neck cancer patient population. She currently serves as the Clinical Coordinator of Rehabilitation Services for Audiology and Speech Pathology (Inpatient and Outpatient) at Northside Hospital's Atlanta, Cherokee, and Forsyth campuses. She developed the head and neck cancer program at Northside Hospital, which provides speech and swallowing services to patients diagnosed with head and neck cancers across the survivorship timeline. She has also led the development of other programs relevant to the care of patients with speech and swallowing impairments in the inpatient and outpatient settings. Virani serves on the Coordinating Committee for SIG 13 as the Editor of the Perspectives on Swallowing and Swallowing Disorders. She presents at various national and international conferences.
