FACULTY

Andrea Warner-Czyz is an Associate Professor at The University of Texas at Dallas. The effect of hearing loss and cochlear implantation on communication skills and, subsequently, social interaction in children and adolescents forms a primary focus of her programmatic research. Discerning variables associated with speech perception, speech production, language, and quality of life outcomes can drive changes in technology and therapy to yield optimized communication performance and life satisfaction for pediatric cochlear implant users.

Financial Disclosures:
• No financial relationships relevant to the content of the session

Nonfinancial Disclosures:
• Serves on American Cochlear Implant Alliance Board

Melissa Sweeney, MS, CCC-SLP, LSLS Cert. AVT, dually serves as the Head of Speech-Language Pathology and Cochlear Implant Program Manager at The University of Texas at Dallas Callier Center for Communication Disorders. Sweeney has provided evaluations and treatment for children with hearing loss and their families for more than 20 years. She also teaches graduate-level classes and has provided training for professionals.

Financial Disclosures:
• No financial relationships relevant to the content of the session

Nonfinancial Disclosures:
• No nonfinancial relationships relevant to the content of the session