DISCLOSURES

Financial Disclosures
This project was funded by grant from CASANA. Jenya Iuzzini-Seigel is an employee of Marquette. Tiffany P. Hogan is an employee of MGH Institute of Health Professions. Jordan R. Green reports no financial relationships to the content of this article.

Nonfinancial Disclosures
Tiffany P. Hogan is an elected board member of the Society for the Scientific Studies of Reading. Jenya Iuzzini-Seigel and Jordan R. Green report no nonfinancial relationships to the content of this article.

Financial Disclosures
Megan S. Overby receives accommodation and travel compensation for presentations at the national conference on childhood apraxia of speech (sponsored by Apraxia Kids) as part of her role as a member of the Professional Advisory Board for Apraxia Kids. Susan S. Caspari and James Schreiber report no financial relationships to the content of this article.

Nonfinancial Disclosures
Megan S. Overby and Susan S. Caspari are members of the Professional Advisory Board for Apraxia Kids. James Schreiber reports no nonfinancial relationships to the content of this article.

Financial Disclosures
This study was supported by an NIH grant. Jonathan L. Preston was a Topic Chair for Speech Sound Disorders in Children for 2016 ASHA Convention, for which he received complimentary registration. He was an Editorial Board Member for the Speech Section of Journal of Speech, Language & Hearing Research, for which he received an honorarium. Megan C. Leece receives funding from NIH. Edwin Maas receives a salary from Temple University and received a consultant fee for work performed on this study. Kerry McNamara reports no financial relationships to the content of this article.

Nonfinancial Disclosures
Jonathan L. Preston is a member of the Apraxia Kids Professional Advisory Committee. Megan C. Leece, Kerry McNamara, and Edwin Maas report no nonfinancial relationships to the content of this article.

Financial Disclosures
Anita van der Merwe was an employee of University of Pretoria, South Africa, and also received research funding from the university. She received additional research funding from the South African National Research Foundation. She has received small honoraria for lecture presentations. Mollie Steyn was an employee of University of Pretoria, South Africa, while the research for this article was being conducted. She is currently an employee of Karin Viljoen Audiologists and Speech Therapists (a private practice). She received funding from National Research Foundation of South Africa.

Nonfinancial Disclosures
Anita van der Merwe has lectured on apraxia of speech at University of Pretoria Departmental Symposia. Mollie Steyn reports no nonfinancial relationships to the content of this article.