DISCLOSURES

Financial Disclosures
Jacob J. Oleson received an honorarium to speak at the ASHA Convention. Ryan McCreery is an employee of Boys Town National Research Hospital, receives research grants from NIDCD/NIH, and is a paid consultant for the British Columbia Early Hearing Program. Grant D. Brown reports no financial relationships to the content of this article.

Nonfinancial Disclosures
Ryan McCreery is a member of the Joint Committee on Infant Hearing. Jacob J. Oleson and Grant D. Brown report no nonfinancial relationships to the content of this article.

Financial Disclosures
Jacob J. Oleson received an honorarium to speak at the ASHA Convention and receives grant funds from NIH. Ryan McCreery is an employee of Boys Town National Research Hospital, receives research grants from NIDCD/NIH, and is a paid consultant for the British Columbia Early Hearing Program. Grant D. Brown reports no financial relationships to the content of this article.

Nonfinancial Disclosures
Ryan McCreery is a member of the Joint Committee on Infant Hearing. Jacob J. Oleson and Grant D. Brown report no nonfinancial relationships to the content of this article.

Financial Disclosures
Katherine R. Gordon reports no financial relationships to the content of this article.

Nonfinancial Disclosures
Katherine R. Gordon reports no nonfinancial relationships to the content of this article.

Financial Disclosures
Bharath Chandrasekaran is an employee of the University of Pittsburgh, receives grant funding from National Institutes of Health and DARPA, and receives compensation from ASHA for his role as Editor-in-Chief of Journal of Speech, Language, and Hearing Research. Giorgio Paulon, Rachel Reetzke, and Abhra Sarkar report no financial relationships to the content of this article.

Nonfinancial Disclosures
Giorgio Paulon, Rachel Reetzke, Bharath Chandrasekaran, and Abhra Sarkar report no nonfinancial relationships to the content of this article.

Financial Disclosures
Sarah C. Kucker was a postdoctoral fellow at University of Texas Dallas/Callier Center for Communication Disorders and received a postdoctoral fellow salary and research funds that supported data collection for the noted manuscript. Kucker is currently an employee of University of Wisconsin Oshkosh and Oklahoma State University. Lynn K. Perry reports no financial relationships to the content of this article.

Nonfinancial Disclosures
Lynn K. Perry and Sarah C. Kucker report no nonfinancial relationships to the content of this article.

Machine Learning Approaches to Analyze Speech-Evoked Neurophysiological Responses, by Zilong Xie, Rachel Reetzke and Bharath Chandrasekaran, published in Journal of Speech, Language, and Hearing Research

Financial Disclosures
Bharath Chandrasekaran is an employee of the University of Pittsburgh, receives grant funding from National Institutes of Health and DARPA, and receives compensation from ASHA for his role as Editor-in-Chief of Journal of Speech, Language, and Hearing Research. Zilong Xie and Rachel Reetzke report no financial relationships to the content of this article.

Nonfinancial Disclosures
Zilong Xie, Rachel Reetzke, and Bharath Chandrasekaran report no nonfinancial relationships to the content of this article.