DISCLOSURES

Introduction: Pediatric Voice Case Studies
Robin A. Samlan
University of Arizona
Tucson, AZ

Disclosures
Financial: Robin A. Samlan is the Perspectives editor for SIG 3.
Nonfinancial: Robin A. Samlan has reported no relevant nonfinancial interests to disclose.

Clinical Case Study: Pediatric Bilateral Benign Vocal Fold Lesions
Robert Brinton Fujiki
Department of Surgery, University of Wisconsin–Madison
Madison, WI

Disclosures
Financial: Robert Brinton Fujiki has reported no relevant financial interests to disclose.
Nonfinancial: Robert Brinton Fujiki has reported no relevant nonfinancial interests to disclose.

Pediatric Unilateral Vocal Fold Paralysis
Paula Barson
Center for Childhood Communication, Department of Speech-Language Pathology, Children’s Hospital of Philadelphia
Philadelphia, PA

Linda Carroll
Division of Otolaryngology, Department of Surgery, Children’s Hospital of Philadelphia
Philadelphia, PA

Karen B. Zur
Division of Otolaryngology, Department of Surgery, Children’s Hospital of Philadelphia
Perelman School of Medicine, University of Pennsylvania
Philadelphia, PA

Disclosures
Financial: Paula Barson, Linda Carroll and Karen B. Zur have reported no relevant financial interests to disclose.
Nonfinancial: Paula Barson, Linda Carroll and Karen B. Zur have reported no relevant nonfinancial interests to disclose.

Fibrovascular Change and Sulcus Vocalis: A Case for Voice Therapy
Sydney Kagan
Department of Otolaryngology and Communication Enhancement, Boston Children’s Hospital
Boston, MA
Pediatric Voice Case Studies (SIG 3)

Roseanne Clark
Department of Otolaryngology and Communication Enhancement, Boston Children’s Hospital
Boston, MA

Disclosures
Financial: Sydney Kagan and Roseanne Clark have reported no relevant financial interests to disclose.
Nonfinancial: Sydney Kagan and Roseanne Clark have reported no relevant nonfinancial interests to disclose.